GROUP 1 OF 9

Images & video

Shoppers cannot touch the product, so the photos do the job of the shop floor.

- [ ] At least four images or a short video
  Front, back, a close-up of the material or finish, and one that shows size or scale. A 15–30 second video of the product in use often answers more than another photo.

- [ ] Show the product in use or on a person
  Fashion: on a model, with the model's height and the size they wear. Beauty: texture and shade swatches on different skin tones. Food: a serving, not just the pack.

- [ ] Each variant shows its own photo
  Picking a colour or pack size changes the main image. Colours look true to life, and every image uses the same background and aspect ratio.

- [ ] Alt text on every product image
  A short, plain description of what the image shows ("navy cotton kurta, side view"). It helps screen-reader users and image search.

GROUP 2 OF 9

Title & description

The words answer the questions the photos cannot.

- [ ] A title that says exactly what it is

  Brand, product type and the attribute people choose by (size, colour, material, pack size), written for shoppers first. No keyword lists.

- [ ] Benefits first, then details

  The first lines say why someone should buy it. Then short bullets for features and a fuller description below for those who want it.

- [ ] A size guide, spec table or ingredient list

  Measurements in the units your buyers use, a fit note ("runs small"), dimensions and compatibility, or the full ingredient list.

  Website checker: Complete product pages

  > India: Packaged goods also show MRP, net quantity, country of origin and manufacturer or importer details on the listing.

  > UK, US, UAE, Australia: Show sizes in the local system (UK, US, EU) and any labelling each market requires for food, cosmetics or supplements.

- [ ] Answers to the common questions

  A few short answers on the page: how to use it, how to care for it, what is in the box, who it suits. Take them from real customer messages.

GROUP 3 OF 9

Price & offers

No guessing about what the shopper will pay or what the offer really is.

- [ ] Price shown the way local shoppers expect

  One clear price near the title, with any saving shown honestly.

  > India: Selling price including GST, with the MRP shown alongside if you discount from it.

  > UK, US, UAE, Australia: UK, UAE and Australian prices include VAT or GST; US prices are shown before sales tax.

- [ ] Offers that are clear and still valid

  The offer appears on the product page and in the cart, with an end date and plain conditions. No expired banners or codes that fail at checkout.

  Website checker: Clear, valid offers

- [ ] One way to raise order value

  A bundle, "frequently bought together" or a free-shipping threshold message such as "add a little more for free delivery". Add one at a time and measure.

  Website checker: Ways to raise order value

- [ ] Payment options shown near the price

  Shoppers who see their preferred way to pay are less likely to leave at checkout.

  Website checker: Smooth checkout

  > India: UPI, cards and whether cash on delivery is available for this item or pin code; EMI for higher-priced products.

  > UK, US, UAE, Australia: Apple Pay, Google Pay and buy now pay later messaging where used: Klarna or Clearpay (UK), Afterpay or Zip (Australia), Tabby or Tamara (UAE).

GROUP 4 OF 9

Delivery & stock

"When will it arrive?" is asked on almost every product page. Answer it before the cart.

- [ ] A delivery date or location check before the cart

  An estimated delivery date, or a check that gives one, near the add-to-cart button.

  Website checker: Complete product pages

  > India: A pin-code check that also confirms COD availability.

  > UK, US, UAE, Australia: A postcode or ZIP check, or "order by 2pm for next-day dispatch" style messaging.

- [ ] Shipping cost stated on the page

  Free, flat or "calculated at checkout" with a link to rates, plus the free-shipping threshold if you have one. No surprises at the last step.

  Website checker: Smooth checkout

- [ ] Clear stock status for every variant

  Sold-out sizes or colours are marked before they are picked, with a back-in-stock alert instead of a dead end.

GROUP 5 OF 9

Trust

Remove the doubts that stop a first-time buyer from paying a brand they do not know yet.

- [ ] Returns summary next to the add-to-cart button

  One line ("Easy 7-day exchange" or "Free returns within 30 days", whatever your real policy is) with a link to the full policy.

  Website checker: Trust signals

- [ ] Contact or WhatsApp easy to find

  A visible way to ask a question before buying: chat, WhatsApp, phone or email, with the hours you reply.

  Website checker: Trust signals

- [ ] Only true trust badges

  Secure payment logos, warranty, genuine-product or certification marks only where they are real and current. Fake or vague badges hurt more than they help.

GROUP 6 OF 9

Reviews

Other buyers are more convincing than any product description.

- [ ] Star rating and review count near the title

  Shoppers look for it at the top of the page. Clicking it jumps to the reviews.

  Website checker: Trust signals

- [ ] Photo reviews and useful filters

  Customer photos and videos, and filters that matter for the category: size bought, skin type, use case.

- [ ] Reviews collected automatically and answered

  A review request goes out after delivery, and negative reviews get a polite, useful reply. Never hide or invent reviews.

GROUP 7 OF 9

SEO

The parts search engines and AI answers read.

- [ ] A unique meta title and description

  Written for this product, not copied from the theme default or another variant.

  Website checker: Security and search basics

- [ ] Valid product structured data

  Product, Offer (price, currency, availability) and review data that matches what the page and your Merchant Center feed show.

- [ ] Clean URL and internal links

  A readable URL, one canonical page for all variants, and links from collections, related products and buying guides.

GROUP 8 OF 9

Speed

A slow product page wastes the ad click that brought the shopper there.

- [ ] The main image appears quickly on mobile

  Serve the first product image at the right size in a modern format and load it first. Aim for a Largest Contentful Paint of 2.5 seconds or less.

  Website checker: Main content load time

- [ ] Nothing jumps while the page loads

  Reserve space for images, review widgets, banners and pop-ups so buttons do not move under the shopper's thumb.

  Website checker: Layout stability and responsiveness

- [ ] Apps and scripts trimmed

  Remove apps you no longer use, and load chat, review and pop-up scripts after the main content.

  Website checker: Mobile speed score

GROUP 9 OF 9

Mobile

Most shoppers will see this page on a phone, so check it on one.

- [ ] Add to cart always within reach
  The button is visible on the first screen or in a sticky bar, and size and colour selectors are big enough to tap.

- [ ] Readable without zooming
  Body text of at least 16px, short paragraphs, and long details tucked into tabs or accordions instead of one endless page.

- [ ] Pop-ups that do not block the product
  No full-screen pop-up on arrival. Delay sign-up offers, make them easy to close, and keep them away from the add-to-cart button.

How to build product pages that sell

What this product page checklist covers

This product page checklist has 30 points in nine groups: images, title and description, price and offers, delivery, trust, reviews, SEO, speed and mobile. Every point is something a shopper notices, or something that decides whether they find the page at all. It works the same on Shopify, WooCommerce and custom stores, because the questions shoppers ask do not depend on your platform.

Points marked "Website checker" match a question in our free ecommerce website checker, so you can run the checker for a quick score and then use this list to fix each item in detail.

Start with the first screen on a phone

Open your best-selling product on a phone and look only at the first screen. Can you see what the product is, the price, a rating and the add-to-cart button without scrolling? Is the main image sharp and quick to load? Most of the decision to stay or leave happens here, so the image, title, price and button deserve more attention than anything further down.

Then scroll as a shopper would. Do you find the size guide, the delivery date and the returns policy before you have to ask? If you keep wanting to message the brand, those answers belong on the page.

A useful habit is to read your customer messages and returns reasons every month. Questions that keep coming back ("does it run small?", "is it suitable for oily skin?", "when will it reach Pune?") point straight at a missing item on this product page checklist.

Price, offers and delivery: remove the doubts

Surprises at checkout are one of the main reasons people abandon carts: a shipping charge they did not expect, a discount code that no longer works, a payment method that is missing. The fix starts on the product page. Show the price the way local shoppers expect, state shipping costs and the free-shipping threshold, and show which payment methods are available.

Offers need the most upkeep. When a sale ends, check every banner, badge, pop-up and code, including ones shared with creators and in ads. An expired offer at the moment someone is ready to buy is worse than no offer at all.

- India: price including GST, MRP alongside, UPI and COD availability by pin code
- UK, UAE and Australia: prices including VAT or GST, with pay-later options where shoppers use them
- US: prices before sales tax, with tax and shipping shown before the final step

Reviews and trust for first-time buyers

A new shopper does not know your brand. Reviews with photos, a visible returns summary and a quick way to ask a question do more to win that first order than any badge. Ask every customer for a review after delivery, reply to the negative ones, and never invent or filter reviews: shoppers notice, and so do platforms and regulators.

Keep trust badges honest. Secure payment logos, warranties and certifications are helpful only when they are real and current. The trust group of this product page checklist is short on purpose: a few honest signals placed near the price and the add-to-cart button work better than a row of logos at the bottom of the page.

SEO and speed: the parts shoppers do not see

A product page that is not found does not sell. Give each product a unique meta title and description, valid product structured data that matches your Merchant Center feed, and links from collections and related products. These also help AI answer engines describe your products accurately.

Speed matters most on mobile and on paid traffic, where you have already paid for the visit. Size and compress images, load the main image first, reserve space so nothing jumps, and remove apps you no longer use.

How to work through the list

Do not try to fix all 30 points on every product at once. Start with template changes that fix every page in one go, such as the returns line, delivery check, sticky add-to-cart bar and review stars. Then work through your best sellers one by one: photos, copy, size guide and answers. Use this product page checklist again whenever you launch a new product, and re-run the website checker after each round of fixes to see what has improved.

+ FAQ

Product page checklist questions

What should a good product page include?

A good product page shows several clear images or a video, a title that says exactly what the product is, benefits before specifications, a size guide or spec table, an honest price and valid offer, a delivery estimate, a returns summary, reviews and a visible add-to-cart button on mobile. Our checklist covers 30 such points in nine groups.

How many product images should I have?

We suggest at least four images per product, or three images and a short video: front, back, a close-up of the material or finish, and one that shows size or the product in use. Every variant should have its own photos, and all images should share the same background and aspect ratio.

Does this product page checklist work for Shopify and WooCommerce?

Yes. The points are platform-neutral and apply to Shopify, WooCommerce and custom stores. How you implement them differs: on Shopify many are theme settings or apps, on WooCommerce they are theme or plugin changes, and on a custom store your developer builds them. Template-level fixes apply to every product at once.

How is this related to your website checker?

Our free ecommerce website checker asks ten quick questions and tests mobile speed, then gives a score out of 100. Nine of those checks relate to product pages, and the matching points here are labelled "Website checker". Run the checker for a quick score, then use this checklist to fix each point in detail.

Which product page fixes should I do first?

Start with fixes that affect every product through the template: delivery estimate, returns summary, review stars near the title, payment options and a sticky add-to-cart bar on mobile. Then improve your best sellers one at a time with better photos, copy and size guides, because they get most of your traffic and ad spend.

Is my progress saved?

Yes. Your ticks are saved in this browser using local storage and are never sent to us, so you can close the page and return later. Use the reset button to start again for another product. You can also download the PDF or print the page to work through the list on paper with your team.
